AN INDEX

TO

DR. WILLIAMS' "SYLLABIC DICTIONARY
OF THE CHINESE LANGUAGE."

ARRANGED ACCORDING TO SIR THOMAS WADE'S SYSTEM OF ORTHOGRAPHY.

BY

JAMES ACHESON,

IMPERIAL MARITIME CUSTOMS.

HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI:
MESSRS. KELLY & WALSH.

1879.

PRINTED AT THE "CHINA MAIL" OFFICE, HONGKONG.

PREFACE.

The publication of this book has been suggested by a sense of the difficulty in using Dr. Williams' "Syllabic Dictionary" experienced by those whose knowledge of Chinese is confined to an acquaintance with the Peking dialect and the Tzū Erh Chi. The pronunciation of Chinese characters, as transliterated by Dr. Williams, is intended to form a "general average" of a number of dialects rather than to represent the sounds heard in any particular locality, and the result is a mixed species of Southern Mandarin which has proved so confusing that only a sound knowledge of the official language in all its variations will enable one to use the Dictionary with facility and prevent the page headings from being entirely misleading. The possessors of this requisite amount of scholarship form, however, but a small minority among those whose duties in this country render an acquaintance with its language indispensable, and there must, in consequence, be many students of Chinese whose patience when using the above work is often sorely tried by repeated failures to find the commonest characters without reference to the radical index or, failing here as often happens, to the "List of Difficult Characters."

It is a matter for regret that the usefulness of a valuable and scholarly work should be impaired by a defect which it was perfectly possible to avoid, but it is hoped, notwithstanding, that the key which is now submitted to the consideration of the Chinese-studying public will prove a partial remedy and that the above difficulty will be in a great measure obviated.

The present Index comprises a re-arrangement of the characters in the "Syllabic Dictionary" according to Sir T. Wade's system of orthography, the system which, forming the basis of the standard work of introduction to the study of the Chinese language, is the most widely used and the most likely to outlive its competitors. In borrowing the orthography of the Tzŭ Erh Chi, however, it will be seen that the writer has instituted an arrangement of the sounds slightly different from that adopted in the "Peking Syllabary;" the vowel u precedes its modification ü, hs follows 'hou, sh follows sêng, ss follows sou, and ts comes after t'ou, but as these changes consist merely in placing the syllables in alphabetical order it is not expected that they will be productive of any confusion. It will also be noticed that the list of sounds is increased, by the addition of the character 稜 (jua), to four hundred and twenty-one.

Every care has been taken to make the references as correct as possible. Very little pretension is made to scientific accuracy in other respects, and shortcomings may be discovered, but it is yet anticipated that the book will attain its principal object and assist students of Chinese in meeting a widely-acknowledged difficulty.

On another page will be seen a description of the arrangement, and at the end of the book an appendix containing a list of the very few errors in the radical index of Dr. Williams' Dictionary, which the writer has been able to discover during four years' constant use of the work.

To Mr. Herbert A. Giles, of Her Britannic Majesty's Consular Service, the writer is indebted for much useful assistance in settling several of the difficult points which have from time to time arisen during the classification of so many characters.

JAMES ACHESON.

I. M. Customs,
CANTON, 20th November, 1879.

ARRANGEMENT.

The method of using Dr. Williams' Dictionary by means of this Index will be sufficiently apparent to require little explanation. In order to facilitate reference the characters have been arranged phonetically; all those coming under the same sound and having a common primitive are grouped together, being further subarranged according to the order of their respective radicals, so that the position of a character in its particular group may be easily determined.

Characters having more than one sound appear under the several headings to which they respectively belong.

Pronunciation and tones are given according to Sir T. Wade's system. The figures on the right hand side of each character denote the page in the "Syllabic Dictionary" on which it will be found, and the accompanying small letter, a, b, or c., shows, in addition, that it occurs in the 1st, 2nd or 3rd column counting from the left.

The order of the syllables will be seen comprehensively on reference to the "Table of Sounds."
